

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE A5THE WASHINGTON POST
2 February 1981EXECUTIVE
NOTES

Maj. Gen. Frank A. Camm, who worked in the old Atomic Energy Commission in the Nixon administration and was deputy to former CIA director Stansfield Turner in the Carter administration, is telling friends he'll be the next director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. That would be a step up from his present job, which is associate director of FEMA — a post to which Carter named him in October 1979.